

ELAINE WALSH CARNEY

Elaine Walsh Carney has more than 15 years of service to the nonprofit sector. Her areas of expertise include facilitation of collaborative processes, creation and implementation of strategic plans, campaign management and execution, and volunteer engagement and support.

Prior to joining The Compass Group, Ms. Carney was the principal of Walsh Mediation, specializing in mediation, negotiation, and development strategy and implementation for nonprofit organizations.

A graduate of Waynflete School and St. Lawrence University, Ms. Carney has completed graduate work at Antioch University and the Harvard Program on Negotiation. She is also a graduate of Leadership Jackson Hole, a community leadership development program sponsored by the Jackson Hole Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the U.S. Institute of Environmental Conflict Resolution Roster through the Udall Center in Tucson, Arizona.

Collaborative partnerships and conflict resolution are special interests for Ms. Carney. She has taught conflict resolution and leadership skills to nonprofit volunteers and staff, students and school administrations, and has helped in the development of peer mediation programs in schools in Jackson Hole, Wyoming and Portland, Maine. She has also worked as a facilitator and delegation leader at Seeds of Peace International Camp in Otisfield, Maine.

Ms. Carney is a former instructor for the National Outdoor Leadership School and currently serves as the co-chair of their national advisory council. She is a founding member of One Percent for the Tetons—partner of the organization One Percent for the Planet—an alliance of businesses that donates one percent of their sales to fund conservation and sustainability initiatives in and around Grand Teton National Park.

Ms. Carney resides in Jackson Hole, Wyoming with her husband John.
